Cancun -- An EEReport

A year after failing to produce a binding emissions-cutting agreement at talks in Copenhagen, Denmark, negotiators met at the table again, this time in Cancun, Mexico, and reached a modest deal. EÈtracks the negotiations and their effect on global policies. Click here to go to the report.

Greenwire -- Thu., December 16, 2010 -- Read the full edition

1. ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE: Activist urges EPA chief 'to roll up your sleeves' at tense W.H. forum

Suzie Canales was visibly frustrated as she sat on a small couch with U.S. EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson yesterday, just outside the first-ever White House Forum on Environmental Justice. "The government has done nothing," said Canales, who had taken time off from her job as a cafeteria worker in Corpus Christi, Texas, to attend the forum. At that point, a White House aide entered the room and asked if Canales could lower her voice. The conversation could be heard by the crowd as Attorney General Eric Holder made a presentation in the auditorium.
